

Colin Tansley is the founder and Director of Intelect, an Isle of Man based investigations, training and cyber risk management company. A career investigator and former senior police officer he specialises in providing relevant security solutions for businesses operating in offshore jurisdictions.

He has travelled across the world during his career and regularly delivers his acclaimed Internet Investigative Skills for Customer Due Diligence to a diverse client base. His expertise is also frequently called upon for insight into the Dark Web and the most up to date online investigative techniques.

Recently nominated as one of the top 10 Due Diligence Service Providers in the Industry, Intelect pride themselves on confidential, professional and ethical investigations. The company also offer a range of complementary services designed to reduce and manage risk. This includes a cyber health check-up tool designed to help business owners avoid a data breach and better understand threats. Having a 'Trusted Network' of solution providers his company can help you and your business stay safer in an increasingly digitised world.

He is a visiting lecturer at University College Isle of Man where he is involved in teaching the 'Professional Investigative Skills' element of their Cyber Security degree programme.
